Although large-scale explosive eruptions have not occurred at Zhupanovsky or adjacent Dzenszursky volcanoes since the middle Pleistocene, the massive andesite-basalt lava flows here were formed in late Holocene.